Börse Online Aktien für die Ewigkeit Index

DESCRIPTION

Buy once, leave it behind and never sell again – according to stock market guru André Kostolany, this is an ideal strategy for achieving wealth with shares. But the approach only works with a few securities that have proven to be the long-term price drivers of the world stock exchanges. The editorial staff of BÖRSE ONLINE has summarized 30 of them in the "Börse Online Aktien für die Ewigkeit Index". This is a cross-industry, global investment approach. The portfolio consists of companies that, due to their outstanding business models, are very likely to continue to operate successfully on the market in more than 100 years. The focus is on manufacturers of products that need to be bought again and again, such as Procter & Gamble (washing powder, razor blades and diapers), McCormick (spices), L'Oréal (shampoo and hairspray) or Nestlé (food). Another focus is on suppliers of raw materials and raw materials, ranging from Equinor (energy) to General Mills (cereals) to Anglo American (platinum and diamonds). But also health (Danaher, Johnson & Johnson), luxury (LVMH, Mercedes-Benz) and technology (Alphabet, Apple, Microsoft) are represented in the index. In addition to a crisis-proof business model and a dominant market position, a positive five- and ten-year performance was a prerequisite for index inclusion. In retrospect, the index showed an increase of more than 400 percent over a period of ten years. All 30 shares are initially equally weighted and are rebalanced semi-annually.
